Purpose of the organisation:

The organisation is a community Museum and Archives Society whose purpose is to acquire, collate, preserve, record and display accordingly all matter of historical significance and interest for the benefit of the citizens of the area formerly known as the Whangaroa County, for education purposes and for visitors and tourists.

Outline the services it will provide

The Whangaroa County Museum & Archive Society Incorporated is public focused and volunteer operated. The Museum plans to spend the funding they receive on:

- Administration and overhead costs directly incurred as a result of running the museum.

With the support of funding, the operation of the Whangaroa Museum will continue to benefit Kaeo and its surrounding community in many ways:

1. The museum building is situated prominently in the middle of Kaeo; as such the museum gives visitors something to look at and another reason to stop in town and explore what Kaeo township has to offer.
2. The museum provides an overview of the history of the Whangaroa/Kaeo/Totara North communities and describes the important role the region played in New Zealand's early history, including Maori settlement, the Boyd massacre, timber milling, Missionaries, early settlers, shipbuilding and primary industries.
3. The museum is an important cultural asset to the district and seeks to build and maintain relationships with Maori communities. The museum is a depository for Taonga, historic objects and archival material that relates to the locality. Volunteers work at recording and preserving these items.
4. The museum offers a voluntary workplace for interested local people. The training and skills they receive in their capacity as volunteers can lead to acquisition of new expertise and widely applicable skills. For example volunteers have written local history books, and frequently advertise the museum by writing 'local history' articles for newspapers. They also provide research for publications.
5. The Society brings local people and those with local connections together, and strengthens relationships between them. The opportunities for visitors and clients to converse and collaborate with volunteers also mean relationships can grow, both in person and online.
6. The Society provides a service to the community by making the collections and knowledge accessible to the people. Volunteers host school groups at the museum doing educational research.
